Twitter A platform that lets people distribute information, images, and video across the web. Twitter is a social networking and micro-blogging service that allows its users to post and share short messages known as Tweets. Users can follow other users, and receive updates as their friends Tweet. The service was created by Jack Dorsey, Noah Glass, and Biz Stone, and launched on October 13, 2006. It allows its users to send Tweets from their mobile phones, and has integrated SMS messaging. The service is most commonly used for exchanging quick, frequent messages and sharing links to news and other content that is relevant to a user's interests. The term "tweeting" is commonly used to refer to the act of sending out a Tweet. Twitter has more than 50 million active users, generating an average of 400 million Tweets per day. The company was valued at $10.8 billion in September 2013, and is headquartered in San Francisco. Twitter is a division of the privately held company Oink, a brand marketing firm that develops and manages social media campaigns for clients, including The Home Depot, CBS, HP, and GM. Twitter has been called a "commodity", a "one-trick pony", and a "brick and mortar" for the Internet. New York Magazine said the company has cornered a market, and Chicago Tribune said its product is a mirror to the real world. Fortune said the company is simply "a dumpster fire" on the way to becoming a significant business. The company's official slogan is "What's happening now," and its tagline is "Get a Twitter." Twitter was named the Most Valuable Social Network of 2010 in a Mashable poll. Twitter's growth has come at the expense of some of its competitors, most notably Facebook. In July 2010, Twitter announced that it had more than 500 million unique users. Twitter originally allowed only text-based posts, limiting the company to 140-character text-based messages
